

About the Author

Alan Anderson currently teaches finance, economics, statistics, and math at several different schools, including Fordham University, New York University, Manhattanville College, Purchase College, and Fairfield University. He has also spent many years in the “real world” as an economist, risk manager, and fixed income analyst. (He prefers academia!)

Alan received his PhD in economics from Fordham University, and also holds an M.S. in financial engineering from Polytechnic University.

