Corrigendum to “Dialectical emotions in a dark heritage site: A study at the Auschwitz Death Camp” [Tourism Management 82, (2021) 104194]

Gila Oren<sup>a</sup>, Amir Shani<sup>b,*</sup>, Yaniv Poria<sup>b</sup><sup>a</sup> Department of Marketing and Strategic Management, College of Management, Rishon-Le-Zion, Israel<sup>b</sup> Department of Hotel and Tourism Management, Guilford Glazer Faculty of Business and Management, Ben-Gurion University of the Negev, POB 653, Beer Sheva, Israel

The authors regret that they mistakenly cited the work Nawijn, J. (2016). Positive psychology in tourism: A critique. Annals of Tourism Research, 56, 151–153. The authors would like to correct the statement on page 6 of the discussion as follows.

“Nawijn (2016) claimed that negative emotions are evolutionary leftovers which are essential to tackle life-threatening scenarios.” should read:

Nawijn (2016) rejected the idea that negative emotions are simply evolutionary leftovers intended only to deal with life-threatening scenarios.

Also, the in text citation on page 1 of Nawijn, Brüggermann, and Mitas (2017) has a spelling error. The correct citation is Nawijn, Brüggermann, and Mitas (2017).

The authors would like to apologize for any inconvenience caused.
